Reverence for Life declares that “evil is what annihilates, hampers, or hinders life ... [and that] goodness, by the same token, is the saving or helping of life, the enabling of whatever life I can to attain its highest development” (The Ethics of Reverence for Life, p.230). Its beauty is its simplicity.

Albert Schweitzer (1875-1965) became well-known for his ethics of reverence for life. While Schweitzer’s life and his ethics have had an enormous appeal to wide audiences all over the world, philosophers have generally ignored his contribution. This may be a loss for philosophy, for, despite some internal problems,...

every situation; rather, the reverence for life ethic is a goal, an ideal, for which we are to strive. Dr. Schweitzer states: “It [reverence for life] cannot be completely achieved; but that fact does not really matter. In this sense, reverence for life is an absolute ethic. It does not lay down specific rules for each possible situation.

Reverence for Life. This is something that we share with everything else that lives, from elephants to blades of grassâ€”and, of course, every human being. So we are brothers and sisters to all living things, and owe to all of them the same care and respect, that we wish for ourselves."

Reverence for Life - Wikipedia

"Reverence for Life" was Schweitzer's unifying term for a concept of ethics. He believed that such an ethic would reconcile the drives of altruism and egoism by requiring a respect for the lives of all other beings and by demanding the highest development of an individual's resources.
